War and Education

In the midst of war this is an attempt to appraise education as it has been, is, and might be,—to explain how the abstractions 'war' and 'education,' so much in people's minds, cover a multitude of sins.

Evidence is presented that our education leaves us without understanding and without emotional control. Without our present systems of education would it be possible to have our present systems of wars?

"Extremely interesting. I have read it with much enlightenment and appreciation," James Mursell, Columbia. "A highly valuable compendium of firsthand information," John Haynes Holmes, Community Church. "Promises to be your best work," George Kneller, Yale.

512 pp., black vellum, 6 x 9, $4.00

from The JOURNAL OF EDUCATION for APRIL

"BEAUTIFUL" DESTRUCTION (an editorial):—

"... Is it possible to give immature men, while still in school, enough sense of perspective so that sanity and idealism will return to them when the world swings back to peace and to the need for sane, wise, well-balanced citizens and leaders? ..."

BUILDING MEN FOR THE FUTURE by Elwood F. Ireland:—

"... Science for many years has been gaining a hammer-lock on the liberal arts, yet even in our scientific world these humanities are far from dead. ..."

JUNIOR GROWS UP by A. Gwin Canan:—

"... With the passage of the bill to draft our eighteen-nineteen year boys, and the inroads already made by war work upon both boys and girls, the junior high becomes the last point in the school program where the ideals which have been set up by the slow, thoughtful growth of a century or more, still have a chance to remain paramount to the pressures brought to bear on the schools by dire necessity. ..."

WHEN BROADCASTERS MISPRONOUNCE by Ruth E. Wheelock:—

"... You can nearly always count on hearing 'al-lies' from some of our most popular commentators. ... There are the words 'luxury,' 'exile,' etc., which Mr. Webster asks us to pronounce with a 'ks' sound for the 'x,' but which we hear pronounced 'lugzhury,' 'eggzile,' etc. ..."

COLLEGES AS WORKSHOPS FOR WAR by Richard S. Ullery:—

"... In the past there may have been some basis for charges that college officials were too often 'living in ivory towers,' content to watch the world go by. There can be no truth in such accusations today. ..."

WESTWARD, LOOK (a story) by Alden J. Carr:—

"... Was this the best he could do—read poems to a roomful of boys and girls while the world was going to pieces? Other men were dying on South Sea Islands, in bombers over hostile cities, on flimsy rafts tossing in a submarine-infested Atlantic. ..."

COOPERATION OUT OF CLASHES by Anson W. Belding:—

"I once heard an address on 'Funny Things that Cure People.' There are 'funny' things that 'cure' perfectly normal boys and girls who have somehow fallen into undesirable attitudes and habits in school. ..."

IT SEEMS TO ME (a regular feature) by Byron C. Kirby:—

"... Reading is all important. Teach it all the time you can, every place you can, as effectively as you can. If something has to be slighted make it anything but reading."
